SUICIDE MADE TO APPEAR MURDER

Love, Divorce, Disappointment and Tragedy Crowded Into Life of S. E. Turner, the Young Man Found Dead at Devil's Slide—Carefully Planned Effort to Make the Crime Look Like Murder.

After deliberately manufacturing every bit of circumstantial evidence possible to indicate murder, S. E. Turner, the ticket agent found dead at Devil's Slide Saturday morning, coolly turned his own automatic revolver upon himself and committed suicide. This is the conclusion of Union Pacific Detective George Lewis, who has just completed a thorough investigation of the mysterious death of the Union Pacific agent.

When the body of Turner was discovered in the station early Saturday morning no one suspected that the young man's death was due to any other cause than murder. The office furniture was upset, the dead man's clothing disarranged, and the safe open, the combination having been tampered with. The agent's watch had been torn from his vest and the chain broken. A bullet hole showed in the right temple and the automatic revolver of the agent was found several feet from the body. The door of the station was partly open.

Immediately after the finding of the body word was sent out to the Ogden police and the authorities at other points along the Union Pacific line, giving notification of the supposed murder. All of the pawn shops and second hand stores in this city were notified to be on the lookout for the dead man's watch.

At about three men, who had passed through Devil's Slide and who could not give a very satisfactory account of themselves, were locked up on the suspicion that they might know something of the killing of the agent and the robbery of the station. This was the condition of things when Detective Lewis was sent to the scene Saturday morning.

Lewis found that only one bullet had been fired from the automatic gun lying on the floor. He also learned that the gun was the property of the agent. The office was small and a careful search of the walls, the floor and the ceiling of the place failed to disclose any bullet holes. The thought swept through the detective's mind that Turner might have committed suicide. He secured permission to have the bullet taken from the dead man's head. The leaden pellet was steel capped and was similar to the bullets remaining in the automatic revolver which belonged to the agent.

Next, the detective learned that the domestic life of the dead man had not been satisfactory. It was learned that he was receiving letters from a girl in the east, despite the fact that he had two months ago married a girl at Morgan, with whom he was living at Devil's Slide.

Further investigation brought out a number of interesting facts in the young man's life which were not generally known. According to the investigation made by Lewis, Turner, though but 23 years of age, had been married a few years ago and later divorced. Before coming west he had engaged himself to marry a girl in the east, but at the same time was the cause of another girl's deep sorrow.

It was under these conditions that Turner came west. About the first of July he secured the position at Devil's Slide, and in anticipation of his marriage he rented a house and purchased the necessary furniture to begin housekeeping. The marriage was to take place about two months ago. The girl had promised to go to Devil's Slide. About the date of the proposed wedding a letter was received by Turner from the father of his fiancée, stating that the wedding could not take place and that the engagement must be broken off. Turner's relations with the other girl in the same city seem to have been discovered by the family of his fiancée, and it was for this reason that the marriage was not permitted to take place.

Piqued by this turn of affairs, Turner paid a visit to Evanston a few days later, and, meeting a girl at a dance, proposed marriage to her. Within a few days after their first meeting they were married. Later Turner received a letter from the girl to whom he was engaged in the east. It appears that these letters caused the young man considerable worry, although the contents of none of them are known.

A month ago Turner took out a life insurance policy for $1,000. He asked the agent at the time if the policy would be paid should his death be due to suicide. He was told that it would not, provided the suicide occurred within 12 months after the issuance of the policy. It is thought that it was to make this policy payable that the false evidences of murder were arranged by the young man prior to the taking of his life.

Detective Lewis states that he found footprints leading to the river back of the station, and that, by investigation, found that they had been made by Turner. It is thought that they were made when the agent left the station to throw his watch into the river. The timepiece has not been found.

There is a suspicion that the young man may have been helped in his act, but this rumor has not yet been confirmed. His books, however, will be audited at once.

PLUMBING CASE IN COURT

The juryman for the December term of the district court were examined this morning by Judge Howell regarding their statutory qualifications to serve as trial jurors, all being accepted except Thomas Bradley, who was exempt from service because of his employment in the United States postal service. A number of jurors of the regular panel were not in court, due to the fact that they were sick, or out of the jurisdiction of the court at this time. District Attorney Nathan J. Harris was not in court and the examination was conducted by the judge.

The first case taken up for trial was that of W. S. Donaldson & Sons against John J. Olsen, in which the plaintiff seeks to recover $28.80, alleged to be a balance due on a plumbing account. The juryman selected to hear the case are, Austin A. Sumner, J. E. Hodson, Thomas J. Edwards, W. F. Sackett, W. H. Eddy, William Hunt, Ernest Townsend and Norman F. Boyle.

The complaint alleges that, in the early part of 1909, the plaintiff entered into a contract with the defendant to do certain plumbing work on the residence of the defendant; that the work was done and the defendant paid for the same, except a balance of $28.80, which amount the plaintiff says the defendant has refused to pay.

The defendant, in his answer, states that the plumbing job was a defective one, and that the plaintiff has been paid all it was worth, setting up that, on the other hand, when the job shall have been gone over and made good, it will cost much more than the balance the plaintiff claims is due.

The case was commenced in the municipal court, a verdict being rendered there in favor of the defendant, the plaintiff appealing to the district court for another hearing.

BIG TREAT IN PHOTO PLAYS THIS WEEK

The amusement and entertainment given patrons of the Photoplay houses in this city is something little less than marvelous, and the question is many times asked, How can they give such entertainment for the money? They employ only the best of musicians, their music is all of a high class, and in the Globe they have made the music a special feature, having an orchestra of six pieces, and the music there alone is worth more than the 10 cents admission. The songs in all the houses are the best to be had in the illustrated line, and while their pictures are always good, this week the management has selected an exceptionally strong bill, and every one visiting the houses can be assured a rare treat.

Francesca De Rimini, a classic feature picture, a beautiful story simply and clearly told, a happening of the thirteenth century. One of the most accurately and elegantly costumed, staged and acted of motion pictures. The Merry Wives of Windsor, the greatest of the immortal Shakespearean comedies, replete with dramatic splendor and scenic embellishments. "Isis," the great Moon Goddess of the Egyptians, the protectress of Thyras, a beautiful singer, is a mythological story which, owing to the delicacy and charm of its many beautifully colored scenes, should find a warm welcome. "Nana and Its Surroundings" is a charming French town that possesses many features of interest. One especially interesting feature is a "hanging bridge," a kind of suspension bridge across which passengers are carried in a cage traveling beneath the main body of the structure. They have western pictures, Biograph pictures, Turkey pictures for the children, and comic pictures, and besides all that entertainment they give a souvenir matinee in two of their houses on Wednesday and in one on Thursday, when they give away a present to the ladies that is often worth several times more than they pay for admission. An amusement of that kind when presented as it is in Ogden is heartily appreciated by the public.

CONTRACT HAS NOT BEEN LET

It was erroneously stated a few days ago that the contract for the excavation and building of the foundation for the new Weber club home had been awarded to a firm of local contractors.

The blue prints and specifications are now on file in the office of the architect, Leslie Hodgson, and bids for the work will be received up to Tuesday evening, when the building committee will open the same and award the contract for the work.

MRS. FRITZ OBTAINS A DIVORCE

Judge Howell this morning granted an interlocutory decree of divorce to Mrs. Fritz, who sought relief from her husband, Otto B. Fritz. The complaint alleged that the parties were married at Clark, South Dakota, in July 1908, and that since that time the defendant had not provided well for the plaintiff and a minor child.

Mrs. Fritz was placed upon the witness stand this morning. She stated that herself and husband came to Ogden about a year ago, Mr. Fritz getting a position with the railway company, earning about $60 a month. She stated that Mr. Fritz had not provided her with any means at all since July 23, of this year and that, prior to that time, she had been compelled to work for her clothes. She also stated that her husband has been addicted to the drink habit and that he has been spending his money in gambling houses.

Mrs. Fritz was restored to her maiden name, Ina Thompson, and given the custody of the minor child.

FAVERSHAM COMING

TO THE OGDEN THEATRE, NEXT THURSDAY EVENING.

William Faversham will be the attraction at the Ogden theatre next Thursday evening, Dec. 8. He will present Charles Frederic Nirdlinger's great play, "The World and His Wife," an adaptation of Jose Echegaray's Spanish masterpiece, "The Great Galeato." In its original form this play was an immense success on the continent, a literal translation of it having appeared in the French, German, Italian and the English languages. Mr. Nirdlinger's adaptation of the play was given a single performance by Mr. Faversham at the Hollis Street theatre, Boston, on Feb. 12, 1907, when starring in "The Squaw Man," and despite the fact that the cast was gotten together at short notice, and a mere makeshift as to scenery, the play achieved a striking success. Indeed, so complete was the triumph of "The World and His Wife" that Mr. Faversham chose it for his next starring medium. In New York this play proved the dramatic hit of the season. He has brought together an unusually fine company, which includes Julie Opp, H. Cooper Cliffe, Lionel Belmore and Harry Redding.

COMMON IS NOT TO BE RETIRED

A meeting of the "common" stockholders of the Amalgamated Sugar company was held today, but was again adjourned without action to Jan. 5 of next year.

It will be remembered that this meeting was called in the first place for Nov. 5, and the object of the board of directors was to get the stockholders' consent to retire the common stock. It seems now that more opposition has developed than had been looked for, and for the second time an adjournment has been compelled.

Secretary Rolapp admitted that, in all probability, the present plan would have to be abandoned, and that the adjournment was had for the purpose of determining what other steps, if any, shall be taken.

Said Judge Rolapp: "I do not want to see any litigation over this matter. If it can be prevented, but at the same time I would like to see the common stock retired. While our present opinions may have to be surrendered, yet I am unable at the present time to tell what other means will be taken to accomplish the desired purpose."

"Mr. Eccles is absent from the state and I have had no opportunity as yet to consult him, or any other director, upon our future policy. The value of sugar stocks are tumbling so fast that it is rather dangerous to stir matters very much."

HEINZE IS IN DANGER

Supreme Court Says There Was Error in His Favor

Washington, Dec. 5.—The supreme court of the United States today held that the federal court of New York had erred in dismissing certain counts of indictments against F. Augustus Heinze, charging misapplication of funds of the Mercantile National bank of New York. Further proceedings must now be had in the lower court.

Heinze was indicted, first in 1909, as president of the Mercantile National bank, New York City, on a charge of intent to defraud the bank by causing the bank to discount improperly single-name commercial paper amounting to about $1,000,000.

The circuit court of the United States for the second district of New York, in which the indictment was brought, held that the indictment was defective.

The next year, 1910, Heinze again was indicted on practically the same charges but this time it was alleged that the purpose of the alleged "misapplication" was to inflate the stock of the United Copper company. Again the indictment was found to be faulty.

From both holdings the government appealed to the supreme court of the United States in accordance with the act of congress allowing the government an appeal in certain criminal cases where the decision on points of law had been adverse to it.

The supreme court today held that the lower court had erred in both cases.

ROOSEVELT ON POLITICS

Long Silence of Former President Is to Be Broken

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 5.—In his letter to Col. I. M. Ullman, president of the New Haven Chamber of Commerce, Col. Theodore Roosevelt says his address at the dinner of that body Tuesday evening of next week will be in the nature of a survey of the recent elections in the country. He will also include a perspective view of current political events.

Col. Ullman said today that, at the time of Col. Roosevelt accepted the invitation, the selection of a subject was left with the guest.

An inkling of the nature of the subject is given in this sentence from the letter: "I will make my first public utterance on political matters at the New Haven Chamber of Commerce dinner."

Judge S. E. Baldwin, the Democratic governor-elect of Connecticut, said he had nothing to give out in response to a query as to whether he had accepted an invitation to attend the
